

Sam: I know that it's probably kind of stressful when you get a call from some random person out in Los Angeles asking you about your website and stuff, so I wanted to make sure I got a hold of you. Let me just go over it one more time to make sure everything is good with you. Ok, you called the lines in the website that I read to you "solicity"?

Winarick: Right.

Sam: And you said that...when I asked you if it was a solicitation you said yes?

Winarick: Correct.

Sam: Good on that one? Okay.

Winarick: Yeah.

Sam: "Winarick charges 2500-4500 bucks for his testing?"

Winarick: Yeah, for psychological testing and the written report, I mean...

Sam: Ok, cool. And the tests are rigorous and time consuming, and to get the extended time on SAT or ACT it's not enough just to have the test, you have to have a history of academic problems, that they're only a small piece of your overall business, and you typically only performs two or three a year?

Winarick: I mean that's all true. Can I add something?

Sam: Yeah go ahead. Can you go on the record now?

Winarick: Yeah, I can go on the record.

Sam: You're on the record now. Go ahead.

Winarick: So in order to qualify for extended time you need IQ test scores, academic achievement test scores, executive functioning test scores and some other standardized tests that go along with psychological testing. You also need behavioral observations with the client, and you need the academic history and sometimes you can have a personality section too.

Sam: Alright cool.

Winarick: Alright.

Sam: I got pretty much the full scope of everything, so I think that's pretty much all I need. So, everything's good I just wanted to make sure we're all good. Alright cool thanks you so much.
